Bringing airports and airlines together

Mark Darby

Until recently, Mark was the Chief Executive Officer at LIAT, the regional airline of the Caribbean based in Antigua. In his 3 years at LIAT, Mark initiated a transformation programme that saw the company move from being loss making over many years to operating profitability. The company grew from operating 11 aircraft to a fleet of 18 and now offers greatly improved levels of punctuality and customer service.

Mark's aviation career started in 1979 as a planning engineer with Laker Airways and later BCAL/BA. In 1989 he changed direction, spending the next 17 years as a specialist air transportation consultant working worldwide for leading consultancies. Since leaving LIAT he has returned to consultancy while looking for his next industry opportunity.
